European Network of Transmission System Operators for Gas (ENTSOG) launches its Annual Report 2015

(Brussels, 9 June, PR110-16) The newly published ENTSOG Annual Report 2015 provides all the necessary details on ENTSOG's activities.

The year 2015 was another challenging year for ENTSOG. Together with the already envisaged deliverables, new activities from ACER and the European Commission required ENTSOG's attention. Although there is still some way to go, the association is looking back on 2015 as a year with a number of important achievements.

Stephan Kamphues, ENTSOG President, said, "After having successfully developed the main part of gas network codes over the previous years, ENTSOG must now take responsibility for ensuring that the codes are working as intended."

A Ten-Year Network Development Plan (TYNDP) incorporating cost-benefit analysis (CBA) methodology to support the Project of Common Interest (PCI) selection was published in 2015 for the first time. The Transparency Platform providing comprehensive information on gas transmission to and within Europe has been further developed.

The implementation reports of CAM and BAL Network Codes (NCs) have brought first insights on how the network codes are working.
